'Beautiful soul' lost to shooting

Innocent bystander.

Police have three suspects in custody, searching for fourth

 JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Friends describe an innocent bystander gunned down in a weekend Calgary shooting as a "people person," with a willingness to learn.

Natasha Farah, 26, had moved to Calgary from Toronto less than a year ago. It's believed she was out front of the Bronco Smokehouse & Saloon with friends around 3 a.m. on Saturday, when up to four men pulled up in a vehicle and opened fire.

Farah was struck by a single bullet and died at the scene.

Police identified her as the victim Monday and reiterated they don't believe she was the target. Three men were arrested in connection with the shooting and were being questioned at press time. A fourth suspect was still being sought.

Word of Farah's death shocked family members, who flocked to social media to pray for her.

Rima Hassan, who identified herself as Farah's stepsister, described her as a "beautiful soul" and requested privacy for her family as they grieve.

Farah graduated from a public relations program at Toronto's Humber College in 2012 and spent five months as an intern under the wing of Danielle Iversen.

"She was an amazing girl," Iversen said in an interview Monday. "I enjoyed mentoring her. She actually did care and did everything the way that I taught her."

Police said all four suspects were from Toronto, but said "There is no connection whatsoever between our victim and the suspects."

The suspect police were still seeking is described as a black man, approximately 20 years old, weighing about 160 pounds and standing five-foot-10. He often wears a gold medallion around his neck, police said.

Representatives with Bronco have declined requests for an interview but noted in an email that their establishment was closed at the time of the shooting.

"On behalf of Bronco Smokehouse we are deeply concerned about the tragic and senseless event that occurred early Saturday morning on 1st Street SW, outside of our premises," the statement read.

Lukaszuk sorry for price roaming bill

Alberta Tory leadership candidate Thomas Lukaszuk apologized Monday for ringing up more than $20,000 in international data roaming charges on one trip.

But he also questioned why the two-year-old information was leaked to the Edmonton Sun newspaper less than two weeks before Progressive Conservative party members vote for a new leader and premier.

"I have nothing to hide. This bill was not hidden," Lukaszuk told reporters after a speech to the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce. "It was in a public venue. Anybody could have accessed it."

"The fact that somebody purposely highlighted it at this point in time obviously is a reputational issue."

Lukaszuk also issued a statement that said he "absolutely" made a mistake "and for that I apologize."

He said he was on a personal trip to Poland and Israel in October 2012 as a guest of the Simon Wiesenthal Centre's "compassion to action" program. It raises awareness about hatred, tolerance, human rights and collaboration.

He was deputy premier at the time and a government legal case needed his attention, he said.

"There were a lot of long conversations and proceedings with lawyers and the courts," Lukaszuk said in the statement. "The case itself is under a court-ordered publication ban, so it is against the law for me to provide details ... Suffice it to say that government faced an issue, it needed to be dealt with, and it was."

Rescue group won't live down charge of distress caused to a dog: Head

'It will probably hurt us forever.' Fur-ever Homes Rescue Society sees drop in clients since 2013 charge

jeremy.nolaïs@metronews.ca

Pet-adoption clients have dropped by half and the head of a city dog rescue group fears her organization will never live down an animal neglect charge laid last year that has since been dropped.

Carmen Zvonik (née Elaraj) learned last week that both she and Fur-ever Homes Rescue Society no longer face a count of animal neglect in relation to alleged "distress caused to a dog over a three-day period" in September 2013.

But Zvonik said the publicity of the charge and a year's worth of criminal proceedings has led to Fur-ever arranging adoptions for only half as many dogs as it typically would.

"It totally defaces everything that we're working for," she said.

"When people question your intentions, question your motivations, it's very discouraging. It's not going to stop us, we are going to keep doing what we're doing, but it's very damaging.

"It's not going to go away — it will probably hurt us forever."

The Calgary Humane Society went public with the charge and said it was related to "neglect of an injury" suffered by a dog involved with Fur-ever.

Zvonik admitted Monday that her group had made "a mistake," but said it fell far short of warranting a criminal charge.

She said the allegations stemmed from a dog who suffered from seizures, and for whom Fur-ever had recently found a new home.

Zvonik said she was out of town when the dog suffered a second seizure.

Fur-ever representatives, as a team, made a decision to wait and see how the pup recovered before rushing it to a veterinarian.

The charge against Zvonik and Fur-ever was officially dropped on Aug. 21.

But Brad Nichols, manager of cruelty investigations for the Calgary Humane Society, said Monday that occurred only because of a "clerical error" in the Crown Prosecutor's office.

"By the time it was caught the statute of limitations was expired," he said.

"I still believe it to have been our right to charge," he later added, "and, if it had gone to trial, that there was a reasonable likelihood of conviction."

Crown lawyer Gord Haight reinforced Nichols' claim when reached by phone.

He said one of the information documents detailing the charges was laid outside of the mandated six-month period and then the wrong item was withdrawn when his office went to rectify the situation.

What is Fur-ever?

Fur-ever Homes Rescue Society is a non-profit group the aims to remove dogs from less-than ideal situations and arrange for them to be placed in private foster homes, according to the group's website.

- President Carmen Zvonik said her group has assisted roughly 2,000 dogs since its launch in November 2011.

Mount Royal University. Current library may turn into health, science space

Mount Royal University has its eyes on turning the current library into a major "teaching space" once a replacement facility is ready in 2017.

Last week, officials were on hand to break ground on the Riddell Library and Learning Centre, an $85.8-million project that offers triple the amount of student space and enough room to hold twice as many books.

The current library remains in the "heart of campus," and officials plan to soon delve into discussions on repurposing the space, a project that comes with a rough funding request of $22 million.

"We may want to do some interim things in there for all of our health and science programs," said Duane Anderson, Mount Royal's administrative vice-president, on Monday.

"Nursing is still one of our biggest programs, and there's lots of synergies with science programs. We may be looking at classrooms ... we might be able to make some larger lecture spaces."

Mount Royal does plan on erecting a dedicated health-sciences wing down the road, but it will come with a hefty $152-million price tag. Anderson said the former library site could serve as a stopgap of sorts. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Shawn Hennessey. Man convicted for role in RCMP killings gets more freedom

A man convicted for his role in the shooting deaths of four Alberta Mounties is getting more unescorted, temporary absences from prison.

The Parole Board of Canada says Shawn Hennessey is doing well behind bars and will be allowed to visit his family for up to 78 hours, once every month, for six months.

He was first granted visits in March to see his wife and children at their home. The board says those visits did not raise concerns, so the passes will now be expanded "to include family outings, attending grocery stores, restaurants and recreation centres."

The board writes in its decision that the visits "will not put the community at risk."

"Continuing your family contact for unescorted temporary absences will continue to strengthen family bonds in a community setting and allow time in your home community for a gradual reintegration back into society."

Hennessey, 35, is set to apply for day parole in September. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Calgary Public Library currently charges annual memberships fees, something that new CEO Bill Ptacek — who took over the job in February — described as "really unusual." Libraries in most other jurisdictions offer services for free. METRO FILE

Free library cards at heart of rebranding

Calgary Public Library.
"We want to be in the lives of more Calgarians," library document states

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Free memberships will be a "key tactic" in ensuring the Calgary Public Library is "seen differently" next year.

That's the wording the library uses in a request for proposals for "rebranding services" that closed earlier this month. It calls for a "full brand rollout" by January 2015.

CEO Bill Ptacek told Metro in July that the library wanted to undertake a "pretty major" rebranding process aimed at boosting library use, which has been declining province-wide since 2010, according to government statistics.

"We're going to kick it up several notches," Ptacek said. "As we go into the new year, we'll be, hopefully, in a new era."

Even though library cards are relatively inexpensive — $12 a year for adults — the move to free memberships is likely to drive more use, according to Eric Erickson, CEO of Erickson Group, a Calgary company that specializes in online marketing.

"Any time someone has to pay for something, they have to see value in what they're paying for," he said. "And because there's so much information available all over the place basically for free, there's not a lot of incentive for people to shell out money to get that information now."

The Edmonton Public Library waived membership fees in 2013, a move that was initially planned as a one-year celebration of its 100th anniversary but was then made permanent.

Marketing director Tina Thomas said the library opted to stick with the free cards after memberships jumped to about 230,000 from roughly 160,000 — an increase of more than 40 per cent — during the first year.

Psychiatrist's anti-trans remarks draw ire

Response. As Calgary Pride approaches, so do opportunities for greater awareness

With Calgary Pride on the horizon, some in Alberta are speaking out against controversial comments from an American psychiatrist.

Back in June, Dr. Paul R. Mc-

Hugh wrote in the Wall Street Journal that transgender people are suffering from a mental disorder and that a sex change is "biologically impossible."

McHugh is the current distinguished service professor of psychiatry for Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, MD, and a former psychiatrist-in-chief.

Comments like these may have adverse effects on the trans community, say Calgary advocates.

"McHugh's piece only furthers the stigma that faces the transgender community," said Chad Griffin, president of the Human Rights Campaign.

The words have also stuck with Mercedes Allen.

"I did find that when I started to transition, things started to fall into place, the way that I thought they were supposed to be," said Allen, a member of Alberta Trans, which is a group that offers support and education for differently-gendered people.

The article has also raised the ire of others in the medical community.

"The doctor's comments are obviously against the recommendations of many professionals throughout the world," said Dr. Kristopher Wells, director of programs at the Institute for Sexual Minority Studies and Services, with the University of Alberta.

With the Calgary Pride Parade and Festival coming up on Sunday, Wells said this should be an opportunity to learn about differently-gendered people first-hand.

"With Pride coming up, it's a time to celebrate the diversity of our community. Sometimes the most important education means we're moving outside of our own comfort zones and our own predispositions."

City's fire halls may get loudspeakers by 2015

Going old-school.

Network of outdoor speakers could broadcast emergency warnings and verbal instructions

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Calgary's fire department aims to have loudspeakers erected at dozens of locations throughout the city — likely on top of or adjacent to each fire hall — by early 2015, to act as an extra layer of emergency alerts for citizens.

"It goes back to days of old," fire Chief Ken Uzeloc said of the devices, which may evoke memories of air-raid sirens for some, but would also employ modern communication technology and be remotely controllable.

Uzeloc said there has already been "a lot of interest" from potential suppliers and there is a range of devices available — some that simply blare a siren, others capable of broadcasting spoken messages over long distances.

Prices range between $20,000 and $80,000 per device, Uzeloc said, and the plan, as it stands, is to install one at each of the city's 39 existing fire halls and two more halls that are under construction and set to open in 2015.

City council approved funding for the project earlier this year as part of a post-flood package of resilience measures.

Windsor Park Fire Station is one of 39 existing fire halls in Calgary. Two more are under construction and set to open in 2015, by which time the fire department aims to have emergency warning sirens erected at each one.

ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Few other Canadian jurisdictions employ such a system, but Uzeloc said they are more common in the United States.

The City of Alameda, Calif., used to use sirens but moved away from them two years ago, according to fire Capt. Sharon Oliver, who said the decision was largely based on the cost of upgrading the system to meet new federal regulations in the U.S.

"It's not necessarily a bad idea for a city to consider," she said of the siren system.

"It's an older-school model but you have to really put some effort into teaching your citizens what it means when they hear a siren."

Officials in Alameda found that the sirens were inaudible indoors but useful in alerting people who were outside at the time of an emergency to find immediate shelter and turn to radio or TV for further information, Oliver said.

Uzeloc said the system could be used for a wide range of emergencies in Calgary, from tornadoes to train derailments, and be activated city-wide or only in select communities.

Stephen Harper joins the search for a piece of Canadian history

Franklin expedition.

PM, during his tour of the North, gets a look at the tools being used to solve the mystery of doomed 1845 voyage

The final resting place of the lost ships of the Franklin expedition may remain a mystery for at least another summer.

A thick pack of sea ice is blocking a key part of the search area, making it inaccessible to ships.

The two ships of Sir John Franklin's doomed 1845 expedition — HMS Erebus and HMS Terror — are believed to be somewhere in the Victoria Strait off the west coast of King William Island, perhaps as far down as the Queen Maud Gulf off the Adelaide Peninsula.

Ryan Harris, an underwater archeologist who is one of the people leading the Parks Canada search, says it's only a matter of time before the remnants of the expedition are found.

Four vessels are leading the search this summer, and Prime Minister Stephen Harper, who is on his annual tour of the North, got a first-hand look at some of the tools being used.

He boarded a naval vessel at Pond Inlet that travelled west to Eclipse Sound. Upon arriving at a picturesque spot surrounded by ice-capped mountains, Harper and his wife, Laureen, got in a Zodiac and motored out to one of two gigantic icebergs towering in the water.

The prime minister then helped lower an autonomous underwater vehicle into the frigid water.

It was the closest Harper had ever been to an iceberg. "I've never been that close to a big chunk of ice. It's huge," he said. "That was great. Really exciting."

Harper said the lost Franklin ships are an iconic piece of Canadian history.

"It ultimately isn't just a story of discovery and mystery and all those things — but it's also really laying the basis for what's in the longer-term Canadian sovereignty," he said.

"Because it's a mystery, and we've got to solve it."

Tranquilizer put to use to catch loose moose

A young moose stands behind a window in an administration building of Siemens in Dresden, Germany, on Monday. The moose evaded capture before getting stuck inside an office building, tantalizingly close to the canteen. A spokesman for the Dresden police said the young bull walked into the building housing German industrial giant Siemens shortly before lunch. Marko Laske said officers and wildlife officials spent six hours trying to shoo the moose into a container, but eventually had to resort to using a tranquilizer gun after he refused to follow orders. The animal, likely to have come from neighbouring Poland, will be released back into the wild. Scan the photo with your Metro News app to see a video of the stuck moose. Ontario university newspaper's 'stalk' your TA article called a 'how-to' for sexual harassment

A suggestion that students should "stalk" graduate teaching assistants to get a date with them has landed Western University's student newspaper in hot water.

The editor-in-chief of the Western Gazette in London, Ont., is standing by his frosh week issue and refusing to apologize, despite an explosion of anger on social media.

Under the heading "do your research," the Gazette article says: "Facebook stalk and get to know your TA."

Editor-in-chief Iain Boekhoff insists the article isn't sexist and is part of a humorous section of the paper, but others are offended by the piece, and continue to demand an apology.

London marketing professional and cartoonist Diana Tamblyn said she was "appalled."

"It's a step-by-step breakdown about how you would get the attention of your teaching assistant if you have a crush on them in class, and it's in the special frosh week edition of the Gazette," she said. "If you're talking about sexual harassment on campus as a how-to list, this is a real problem that exists every day."

Tamblyn wants the article disposed of, online and in print, and an official retraction issued.

Western University's Janice Deakin, provost and vice-president academic, has written to the Gazette to express her displeasure with the teaching assistants article.

"Not only does the spirit of the article run contrary to Western's efforts to have a workplace and learning environment that is free from sexual harassment," she wrote, "it is disrespectful of the essential contribution graduate teaching assistants make to Western's academic mission."

On behalf of the Gazette, Boekhoff said frosh week brings a special issue that includes light-hearted content, like the teaching assistants article. He insisted he doesn't need to apologize because the article wasn't sexist and was even gender-neutral.

"I don't regret publishing it," Boekhoff said. "I regret that it caused offence to so many people, and it wasn't well received by some people."

As for the word "stalk," Boekhoff said, it was never intended to be taken literally and the Gazette's readership would understand that.

"Facebook stalk" is a common term for students and is not a malicious term in any way," he said.

Thousands pack church in St. Louis to mourn slain teen Michael Brown 'Break for funeral'

Father asked protesters for a 'day of silence' on Monday to let the family grieve

The mourners filled an enormous church to remember Michael Brown — a "gentle giant," aspiring rapper and recent high school graduate on his way to a technical college.

But the funeral that unfolded Monday was about much more than the black 18-year-old who lay in the closed casket after being shot to death by a white police officer.

More than 4,500 mourners filled Friendly Temple Missionary Baptist Church in St. Louis for the service, which at times seemed like a cross between a gospel revival and a rock concert. The emotional service sought to consecrate Brown's death as another in the long history of the civil rights movement and implored black Americans to change their protest chants into legislation and law.

The Rev. Al Sharpton called for a movement to clean up police forces and the communities they serve.

"We're not anti-police. We respect police. But those police that are wrong need to be dealt with just like those in our community that are wrong need to be dealt with," Sharpton said.

Sharpton also took the black community to task, saying it should be as upset about black-on-black crime as it is about police violence: "We have to be outraged by our disrespect for each other."

"Blackness," he added, "has never been about being a gangster or a thug."

Call for action

"Show up at the voting booths. Let your voices be heard, and let everyone know that we have had enough of all of this."

Eric Davis, a cousin of Michael Brown's.

Brown's death fuelled nearly two weeks of street protests in the St. Louis suburb of Ferguson. But the teen's father, Michael Brown Sr., asked protesters to observe a "day of silence" on Monday to let the family grieve.

At the Ferguson Police Department, where a small but steady group of protesters have stood vigil for two weeks, a handmade sign announced a "break for funeral."

Brown was unarmed when he was shot on Aug. 9 by officer Darren Wilson. A grand jury is considering evidence in the case, and a federal investigation is underway. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sask. premier: Inter-province unity key

Provinces back public inquiry. Regional governments support aboriginal leaders in wake of girl's death

Saskatchewan Premier Brad Wall says he doesn't know how long any level of government can ignore something like the murder of a 15-year-old aboriginal girl before looking at ways to prevent such deaths.

Tina Fontaine was found wrapped in a bag and dumped in the Red River in Winnipeg. Her death has prompted renewed calls for a public inquiry into the high number of missing and murdered aboriginal women.

Wall says provinces and aboriginal leaders back that call, even if the federal government isn't on board.

"I think when the provinces are united as we are, together with the national aboriginal leadership, I think there is momentum," Wall said Monday in a telephone interview with The Canadian Press.

"I think the RCMP have agreed in principle with the importance of an inquiry and I think there is momentum picking up."

In May, the RCMP released a report stating that of 1,181 cases since 1980, aboriginal women — who make up 4.3 per cent of Canada's population — account for 16 per cent of female homicides and 11.3 per cent of missing women.

In Saskatchewan, aboriginal women make up 5.5 per cent of homicide victims, the highest of all provinces; the RCMP report found 153 aboriginal women were murdered between 1980 and 2012.

Police chiefs not yet asked to endorse public inquiry

Tina Fontaine's death. Murder and disappearance of aboriginal women on law enforcement's radar, says police-chief association head

Chief Const. Jim Chu, president of the Canadian Association Chiefs of Police TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

The head of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police says the number of missing and murdered aboriginal women is "on the radar" of the country's law enforcement leaders.

But Chief Const. Jim Chu of the Vancouver Police Department, who is the association's outgoing president, avoided taking sides in what has become a politicized debate over the need for a public inquiry.

Hundreds of the nation's top officers gathered Monday for their annual general meeting in Victoria, where Chu said the association's policing with aboriginal people committee had already met for a couple of days to discuss the issue.

"They've had an extensive discussion on it," said Chu, referring to the committee.

"One thing that hasn't happened is the groups that are calling for the national inquiry have not asked us to support their request.... The details on the nature of the request and the nature of the inquiry, we need to get them."

Chu said the association will reach out to the Native Women's Association of Canada and other groups to get those details.

"And then we'll come out with a position," said Chu.

The death of teenager Tina Fontaine in Winnipeg has renewed calls for an inquiry. The 15-year-old was found Aug. 17, wrapped in a bag and dumped in the Red River. She had been in Winnipeg less than a month when she ran away from foster care. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Passengers force flight diversion

Two United Airlines passengers entered a heated argument Sunday as one prevented the other from reclining in their seat.

A male passenger was using the Knee Defender, a gadget that attaches to a passenger's tray table, which kept the passenger in front of him from reclining.

The gadget is prohibited by United Airlines, but when the man refused to remove it, the female passenger in front of him turned and threw water in his face. The flight was rerouted to Chicago; both were left there while their flight continued on to Denver. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iran claims it shot down Israeli drone

This undated photo, released Monday by the Iranian Revolutionary Guards, purports to show the wreckage of an Israeli drone which Iran claims it shot down near an Iranian nuclear site deep inland over the weekend, prompting questions about how a drone with limited range could have penetrated so deeply and whether it is indeed what Tehran claims it to be. A brief video, aired on the Arabic-language Al-Alam TV, shows what the channel says are parts of the drone, scattered in an unidentified desert area. The channel identified the unmanned vehicle as a Hermes 450, a known Israeli model. Iranian state-linked media previously touted Iranian-made drones that bore some resemblance to the Israeli model. British aviation expert Paul E. Eden said it may actually be an Iranian-made drone being shown in the footage. SEPAHNEWS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Poll. Students need to get an education on actual costs of a post-secondary education

Post-secondary students grossly underestimate the cost of school, not to mention how much support they'll need from their parents, a new survey shows.

The online poll, conducted in July for CIBC, found that 67 per cent of parents were willing to pay for two-thirds of their children's post-secondary education while, on average, their kids believed their parents were footing only a third of the bill.

But in a twist — 41 per cent of students surveyed still thought their parents were paying too much. Those respondents said parents should only be covering a quarter of the cost or less.

On average, parents expected the entire cost of each child's post-secondary education would be $64,300.

$64,300

On average, parents expected the entire cost of each child's post-secondary education would be $64,300.

"Part of the disconnect between parents and their children is likely that students aren't accounting for all of the costs beyond tuition," said the head of CIBC's online brokerage.

Millennials aren't fully cognizant of the true cost of a degree or diploma, she said.

"The conversation between parents and students about the full costs of education, and how to pay for it, needs to start long before the first tuition payment is due." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Too bad. Burger King and Tim Hortons may merge, but there's 'zero chance' of crossover at the chains

A deal between Tim Hortons and Burger King could finally help the coffee and doughnut chain successfully expand into the U.S. market, but it shouldn't mean customers will see any changes when they visit either fast-food chain.

Ken Wong, a marketing expert with Queen's University, said it is all about the U.S. for Tim Hortons.

"They've had some difficulty penetrating the U.S. market with dedicated Tim Hortons franchises and part of that is, of course, that while the brand is one of Canada's strongest, it really doesn't have much resonance in the U.S., especially up against Dunkin' Donuts," Wong said.

Tim Hortons has since added new menu items such as a crispy chicken sandwich and side dishes to boost breakfast and lunch sales. But that doesn't mean customers should expect to get a Whopper with their double-double if the deal goes through.

"There's zero chance you'll see Tim Hortons coffee in Burger King restaurants — Tim Hortons is not a well-known brand in the United States, it's not like you're putting Starbucks in there," Danahy said.

"It would have zero benefits for Burger King. It would only serve to make it more difficult for the owners of the company to sell off one or the other at some point in the future (and) that's what private equity is there to do." THE CANADIAN PRESS firmed Sunday that they are in talks and that the Oakville, Ont.-based Tim Hortons and the Miami-based Burger King would operate as stand-alone brands if they were to go ahead with a deal.

Jim Danahy, chief executive of consultancy CustomerLab, says the deal makes sense for Tim Hortons, given that the company has made it clear that it needed a partner on the ground in the U.S.

"They acquire, with this merger, access to the franchisees who own and operate more than 3,500 restaurants in the United States," Danahy said.

Hotels collecting record fees

Forget bad weather, traffic jams and kids asking, "Are we there yet?" The real headache for many travellers is a quickly-growing list of hotel surcharges, even for items they never use.

Guaranteeing two queen beds or one king bed will cost you, as will checking in early or checking out late. Don't need the in-room safe? You're likely still paying. And the overpriced can of soda may be the least of your issues with the hotel minibar.

Vacationers in the U.S. are finding it harder to anticipate the true cost of their stay, especially because many of these charges vary from hotel to hotel, even within the same chain.

Coming out of the recession, the travel industry grew fee-happy. Hotel surcharges predate the recession, but recently properties have been catching up to the rest of the industry.

This year, hotels will take in a record $2.25 billion US in revenue from such add-ons, six per cent more than in 2013 and nearly double that of a decade ago, according to a new study released Monday by Hanson. Nearly half of the increase can be attributed to new surcharges and hotels increasing the amounts of existing fees.

E-cigarettes a last resort for smokers trying to quit

Worry. Leading cancer and heart groups want more regulation, but admit nicotine-vapour products could help people stop smoking

The American Heart Association's first policy statement on electronic cigarettes backs them as a last resort to help smokers quit. The American Cancer Society has no formal policy but quietly took a similar stance in May.

Both groups express great concern about these popular nicotine-vapour products and urge more regulation, especially to keep them away from youth. They also stress that proven smoking cessation methods should always be tried first.

But if those fail, "it is reasonable to have a conversation" about e-cigarettes, said the Heart Association's president,

Background

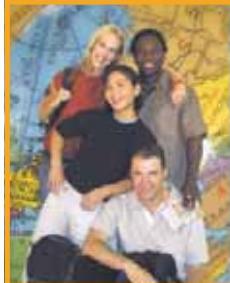

E-cigarettes are battery-powered devices that vaporize nicotine.

- They've been sold in the U.S. since 2007 and now have millions of users worldwide and nearly $2 billion in annual sales.
- They contain fewer toxic substances than traditional cigarettes, but little is known about their health effects.

Dr. Elliott Antman. The Cancer Society said e-cigarettes "may be a reasonable option" for people who could not quit after trying counselling and approved methods, such as nicotine patches.

Neither group recommends e-cigarettes for smoking cessation, and makers of the devices do not market them that way.

ARE THEY SINGLE? MAYBE, UM, ASK

If you're scrolling and swiping through an online dating site or app it's easy to assume that the men and women on screen are in fact available (or at least they're pretending to be) but what happens when you lock eyes with an attractive stranger in real life?

Married couples wear rings as a sign of commitment and to show the world that they're off the market, but there isn't really a universal indicator for available men and women to use to advertise that they're single and ready to mingle.

Back in 2013, Rina Mardahl and Rob Young launched MY Single Band in an attempt to create a wedding ring equivalent for singletons. The colourful silicone wristbands were designed to help men and women indicate their relationship status and attract potential mates. In a press release, Mardahl and Young claimed the bands — priced at around $10 a pop — were "the future of dating" and would "increase new encounters, lower the fear of first introductions, and suit busy modern lifestyles."

SHE SAYS

Unfortunately, it seems the masses weren't inclined to wear their hearts on their sleeve, or on their wrists. One year later, the mysingleworld.com website is offline and I think it's safe to say that the not-so-subtle wristbands didn't exactly revolutionize the dating landscape in the way the creators had hoped.

Perhaps MY Single Band didn't take off because the product looked so similar to the ubiquitous Livestrong bracelets and other charitable accessories. Or perhaps it was because most people don't want to appear desperate by wearing a brightly coloured rubber wristband that screams "I'm Single!"

Even online, a large percentage of Facebook users choose not to indicate whether they are "Single" or "In a Relationship" out of privacy concerns. Personally I've never been one for public declarations of romantic availability; I just can't imagine going through a painful real-life breakup and then having to log in to my Facebook account to revise my relationship status for my entire extended social circle to see.

Who knew rubber bracelets wouldn't be cool forever?

Unfortunately, it seems the masses weren't inclined to wear their hearts on their sleeve, or on their wrists.

Ultimately the easiest way to determine if someone is available is to simply strike up a conversation. It's a daunting task to enquire after a stranger's romantic life, but you'll never know unless you try. And even if the object of your affection turns you down, getting rejected momentarily is certainly less embarrassing than wearing an obnoxious bracelet around 24/7 to broadcast your singledom.

Skyler the lobster avoids death by seafood-lover's special due to rare blue colouring

A lobsterman says one of his traps caught a one-in-two-million crustacean: a blue lobster.

WCSH-TV reports Jay LaPlante of the Miss Meghan Lobster Catch company caught the curious creature in Scarborough, Maine, over the weekend. LaPlante and daughter Meghan were hauling traps when she discovered the bright blue critter.

The story has a happy ending for the lobster. Meghan says she is naming it Skyler and donating it to the Maine State Aquarium, far from any dinner rolls or pats of butter.

The aquarium says it has three other blue lobsters and an orange one.

LaPlante says it's the first time he has caught a blue lobster.

Breaking Bad and Modern Family get Emmy's love

Emmy Awards.

Networks dominate top awards for shows and actors, as tribute to Williams and Weird Al parody draw raves

Modern Family won a record-breaking fifth best comedy series Emmy Award and a dominant Breaking Bad captured the top drama award and a trio of acting honours in Monday's ceremony, which took a sombre turn as Robin Williams was remembered with restraint and grace by his longtime friend, Billy Crystal.

"He made us laugh. Hard. Every time you saw him," Crystal said of Williams at the conclusion of a tribute to industry members who died last year. "Robin Williams, what a concept."

Bryan Cranston was honoured as best actor in a drama for Breaking Bad, proving that True Detective nominee Matthew McConaughey's movie-star appeal couldn't conquer all.

"I have gratitude for everything that has happened," Cranston said. His victory ties him with four-time best drama actor champ Dennis Franz. Cranston's co-stars Aaron Paul and Anna Gunn were honoured in categories for best drama supporting acting.

"Thank you for this wonderful farewell to our show," creator Vince Gilligan said of the series about a teacher-turned-drug kingpin that ended with a bang.

The Good Wife star Julianna Margulies won the Emmy for best lead actress in a drama series. "What a wonderful time for women on television," Margulies said.

McConaughey was the object of too-handsome jokes by presenter Jimmy Kimmel and adoration by winner Gail Mancuso, honoured as best director for an episode of Modern Family.

"If you don't mind, Matthew McConaughey, I'm gonna make eye contact with you right now," she said from the stage, making good by holding the actor's gaze for much of her speech.

The ceremony honouring the best of TV wasn't shy about playing the movie-star card. "Six minutes to Woody Harrelson" flashed on screen during Colin Hanks' acceptance speech for best miniseries direction for Fargo.

Harrelson and his True Detective co-star were given time to banter before announcing that Benedict Cumberbatch of Sherlock: His Last Vow was the winner of the best miniseries actor award.

"So you won Oscar, (People magazine's) Sexiest Man Alive and now you want an Emmy, too. Isn't that a little bit greedy?" Harrelson teased his fellow nominee.

Fargo was named best miniseries, and the award for best miniseries actress went to Jessica Lange of American Horror Story: Coven.

Buffering the miniseries awards was a parody routine about top nominees by Weird Al Yankovic. Musical numbers usually look out of place at the Emmys, and this one was no different. Other scripted banter fell flat, although host Seth Meyers kept soldiering on. CBS' The Big Bang Theory star Jim Parsons was crowned as best comedy series actor, giving him his fourth Emmy and putting him in league with all-time sitcom winners Kelsey Grammer and Michael J. Fox.

ABC's Modern Family, which tied Frasier as the all-time sitcom champ with five statuettes, also captured a best comedy supporting actor trophy for Ty Burrell.

Allison Janney was honoured as best supporting comedy actress for CBS' Mom, adding to the trophy she'd already picked up as guest actress on Masters of Sex.

Julia Louis-Dreyfus, who received her third consecutive best comedy actress Emmy for the political comedy Veep, drew big laughs as she stopped to exchange faux heated kisses with Cranston, who earlier was her co-presenter and who appeared with her on Seinfeld.

Some things never change, like Britney Spears' ridiculous fashion sense. What seemed like a terrible idea 13 years ago — matching all-denim ensembles — is still a terrible idea, as Katy Perry proved at the VMAs, teaming up with rapper Riff Raff to don a dress and suit made from poor, mistreated blue jeans in homage to Spears and then-boyfriend Justin Timberlake's infamous red carpet look from the VMAs in 2001. So what did Spears think of the tribute? You might be shocked to learn that she's totally into it. "Just when I thought the denim dress had retired.... you bring it back! You looked amazing," Spears tweeted at Perry.

Lena helps gal-pal Taylor get Swift about what it means to be a feminist

It's a regular old gal-pal lovefest between Taylor Swift and Girls creator Lena Dunham, who just can't say enough nice things about each other. Swift insists that her evolving views on feminism are all thanks to her friendship with Dunham. "As a teenager, I didn't understand that saying you're a feminist is just saying that you hope women and men will have equal rights and equal opportunities. What it seemed to me, the way it was phrased in culture, society, was that you hate men," Swift tells the Guardian. "Becoming friends with Lena — without her preaching to me, but just seeing why she believes what she believes, why she says what she says, why she stands for what she stands for — has made me realize that I've been taking a feminist stance without actually saying so."

OMG BLUE IVY JUST PERSONALLY WAVED AT ME. MY LIFE IS OVER.

Recent reports suggested that Lindsay Lohan had been reaching out to her sober friends, but maybe it was just to taunt them. The on-again, off-again party girl has been on a spree, apparently, hitting four nightclubs in two different countries in one week, according to Radar Online. Lohan started her week enjoying herself at London's swanky Chiltern Firehouse until 3 a.m. and was all smiles when she snuck out the kitchen door. But then she headed to New York, where her revelry didn't go as well. On the first night, she hit up club Up & Down, where she reportedly tried to do an ALS Ice Bucket Challenge video — except no one was filming it. Then at two separate nightclubs, Lohan pitched a fit when she couldn't get the table she wanted, according to sources. Looks like she was onto something with her whole "I want to move to England permanently" thing.

Chris Brown's split with old gang ends with a bang bang

Chris Brown

So what was behind the nightclub shooting this weekend that put a damper on some pre-VMAs festivities? As one source who's a big fan of understatement puts it, things went south "when a group of men tried to murder Chris Brown." Hate when that happens. According to MediaTake-Out.com, the impetus for the shooting was Brown's recent attempts to change his social scene post-rehab. "Chris used to run with a bunch of gang bangers who were really scary. When he got out (of rehab), he cut them all off," a source tells the website. "I guess they're upset about that."

The roots of bad hair days

Emotional well-being.

Are we being shallow when our mane affects our mood, or is the feeling more complex?

IZABELA SZYDLO
life@metronews.ca

You can curl it or straighten it, gel it or leave it loose, cut it short or let it grow — all depending on your mood.

Hair is a huge part of our identity, so it is no surprise that a bad hair day can leave us feeling pretty low.

"Understand that this isn't superficial," says Dr. Vivian Diller, a clinical psychologist in New York. "I always remind people that we are raised to associate a head of hair with health, and lack of hair with illness. So, bad hair days actually do make us feel bad."

"Bad" may be an understatement. A Yale University study of men and women ages 17 to 30 concluded that even the thought of a bad hair day made both genders believe they weren't as smart as others.

Socially, men said they felt more nervous and less self-confident, while women reported feeling embarrassed, ashamed and self-conscious when experiencing bad hair days.

Diller attributes these differences to gender identity.

"The commonality of having a bad hair day is people feel out of control," she says.

"Men have a bit more comfort with bad hair days because their identity is more rooted in power. Women's identity, while they have worked very hard to combat it, still goes back to their appearance. That's probably hard-wired because of the role that we played in the sur-

Did you know that gender roles play into how women and men feel during bad hair days? iSTOCK vival of the species. Women's role was to attract a mate and procreate. Men's role was to take care of everybody."

And while Diller says the old adage "what's on the inside counts" is true, so is another saying: "When you look good you feel good, but when you feel good you also look better," she says. "There is definitely a feedback loop."

Does that mean we have become a more narcissistic society? Diller doesn't think so. Instead, she says what has changed is our accessibility to images of "perfection," which plays into our mental crises when our hair refuses to be tamed.

"Hair has always been important," she says, referencing historical figures like Cleopatra with her jet-black tresses and Samson, whose strength was dependant on his locks.

"But the fact that we have social media and imagery that can be altered by the everyday person has put a kind of pressure on looking perfect. If a bad hair day feels like it is going to ruin your whole day or self-esteem, then you are falling victim to this idea that to feel good, we have to be flawless."

Tara Gosling, Toronto-based stylist at Small Talk Barber Shop and Salon, and Jezreel Batson, a barber who owns JB Barber Design in Scarborough, Ont. regularly deal with clients singing the hair day blues.

Gosling says it's vital to remember that a bad hair day is exactly that. "You have to remind yourself that what you're feeling is in your head, and it's temporary," she says. "All it takes is one person to change it with a compliment because what you feel doesn't always reflect what you look like."

Batson, meanwhile, recommends recognizing that while hair is an important part of

Tame your mane

Gosling and Batson share their tips to minimize bad hair days.

- The cut. "Your hair will change day to day, depending on heat, humidity and the type of shampoo and products you use. But having a haircut that actually suits your lifestyle is key," says Gosling.
- Consistency. "Find some sense of consistency with what you feel comfortable with in terms of your style," says Batson. "Every once in a while it's good to be edgy or trendy, but ... usually bad hair days have to do with something that's gone astray from the norm."
- Focus on other features. "Putting your hair up shows more of your face, so you can highlight that," says Gosling.
- Products. "Products are important because they play a role in terms of hair health," explains Batson. "It's important that you know what ingredients you're putting in."

who you are, it isn't your entire identity. "Having the ability to utilize hair as a component of self-expression adds to a person's holistic well-being," says Batson. "However, being in an industry of trends, I know expression is based on what someone is feeling at the moment, not who the person truly is. Because it can be so easily altered, expression through hair is fleeting — just like a bad hair day."

Tuna-less Tuna Sandwich. If you're looking to explore vegan dishes, this is a great starting point

THERESA ALBERT

This high-nutrient, high-protein mixture tastes almost like tuna salad.

It is a great make-ahead item that can be added to sandwiches or salads for a complete meal. It is also a great way to start working more plant based food into your day.

- Soak chickpeas overnight (approximately two cups if soaking) or use canned. If using dry, drain and cook in lightly boiling water until tender.

- Mash chickpeas with a potato masher to break them up to "tuna" size pieces.

- Add onion, celery, pickles

Ingredients

- 3 cups cooked chickpeas (or canned)
- 2 tbsp finely diced red onion
- 1/2 cup finely diced celery
- 1/4 cup chopped pickles
- 1/4 cup rinsed capers
- 2 tbsp nori flakes
- 1 tsp sea salt
- 1/2 tsp black pepper
- 1/2 cup veggieanaise or mayonnaise and capers and mix well. Add nori, salt and pepper, veggieanaise and mix. Store in fridge up to 3 days. Use as sandwich filling or salad toppings.

Talk to Michael Abramson, owner and operator of Yamchops, Toronto's first vegan butcher shop, and he will tell you that he doesn't feel like a weirdo anymore.

While only "six per cent of Canadians call vegetarianism their way of life, 35 per cent of us incorporate meatless meals three days per week or more," he says.

It is a growth market with famous vegans like Bill Clinton, Ellen Degeneres, Paul McCartney and Gwyneth Paltrow lending their voices to the movement.

Needless to say, moving in the direction of plant-based eating is well known, well supported and now, well, delicious.

Abramson's tips for moving in this direction include:

- Make vegan foods familiar in mouth feel and taste to traditional foods.

- Focus on flavour and intensity; bland is brutal in any cuisine.
- Look for the fourth generation of soy: HME (High Moisture Extrusion), which is a soy and pea protein product ready to address any taste.
- Think about cold-press juicing. Cold pressing preserves all of the enzymes and nutrient as no heat, pasteurization or friction interferes with the living tonic.

If you are new to plant-based dining, Abramson suggests that you experiment and explore. Check out ethnic markets for new greens and beans and seek inspiration at places like Yamchops and liven up your regular meals with it.

You can benefit from the experience of those who have come before you.

Building your own education

Kyle Klein had long been interested in working in the world of emergency response. Over the years, the 25-year-old Toronto native had worked in security, medical response and health and safety, so when he saw that the G. Raymond Chang School of Continuing Education at Ryerson University in Toronto was offering a certificate program in disaster and emergency management, he signed up.

"It took all of those experiences and tied them together," Klein said.

The program also did so without interrupting Klein's day-to-day work as assistant emergency planner for the city of Vaughan, as the courses and class work were all online. Klein graduated from the disaster and emergency management certificate program in June and landed the role of manager of emergency planning at Kwantlen Polytechnic University.

Kyle Klein. STEFANIA SECCIA/FOR METRO

"Being able to learn online made all the difference," Klein said. "It would have been difficult for me to find the time to schedule the course work hours with my work obligations."

Klein's situation is not uncommon — an adult with a full-time job looking to expand his work skills through continuing education. That's why many colleges and universities offer a variety of ways to access continuing education.

"We offer flexible delivery when it comes to learning," said Marie Bountrogianni, dean of the Chang School. "We have 70,000 registered continuing education students per year and we provide the largest number of courses online."

But customizing learning is more than classes online versus classes in a classroom. You can also blend those two options, be print-based or simply vary the number of courses you take at a given time to complete a certificate.

That flexibility extends to the big picture, too.

"If an adult learner is working towards a certificate, and then something in their life changes, the credits earned can be applied to a degree, too," Bountrogianni said. "You aren't necessarily going to have the same job all your life anymore. Approximately half of our students already have degrees, but they want to improve, they want the skills the market needs."

CAD professionals are in demand in Alberta

Earn a diploma in less than a year at Digital School

Digital School offers computer-aided design (CAD) training where students are able to complete diploma programs in less than a year.

With Alberta's booming economy, Digital School is the perfect place to get training in fields where CAD professionals are in demand, such as the computer-aided drafting with engineering specialty program.

Engineering CAD technicians with the process piping specialization work alongside petroleum engineers to search the world for reservoirs containing oil or natural gas. They also work with geologists and other specialists to understand the geologic setting and properties of the rock containing the reservoir, determine the drilling methods to be used, and monitor drilling, production and environmental operations.

They design and draft equipment and processes to achieve the maximum recovery of oil and gas, often using computer models to simulate reservoir performance using different recovery techniques.

Prior experience in drafting or engineering is not required since the program is designed to start with basic instruction and conclude with more specialized courses.

Graduates can be found working in process design and manufacturing facilities, engineering firms and other related industries.

Applications for the late September start date are still being accepted.

Online programs announced for SAIT

New courses fuelled by industry support

In an increasingly digital world, it only makes sense for post-secondary institutions to offer students a wide variety of delivery formats when it comes to their education.

The fall, SAIT Polytechnic is offering a number of new online programs, including SharePoint developer, and medical device reprocessing.

"While some private companies offer SharePoint training, I'm not aware of any other post-secondary school in Alberta with this kind of program," says Martin Purvis, Continuing and Distance Education coordinator with SAIT's School of Information and Communications Technologies.

"The fact it's offered online is also unique."

Microsoft SharePoint is a Web application platform used in almost all major industries to increase collaboration and productivity between groups.

Purvis says it was industry support that fuelled development of the SAIT program.

"Three companies — S.i Systems, Suncor and DevFacto Technologies — were involved,"

FOUR COURSES NOW ONLINE

Other new online courses include energy asset management online, and NDT (non-destructive testing) new online courses. These four new courses are uniquely offered only at SAIT. All of these new programs are a part of SAIT's commitment to offering students flexible programming, in fields where these skills are in demand.

says Purvis. "They had identified SharePoint as a key area where there is a skills shortage and they began working with SAIT to initiate development of the courses."

The program consists of four courses, each running eight weeks. Students have up to five years to complete all courses to earn the certificate of achievement.

The brand new medical device reprocessing technician (MDRT) certificate is another program worth checking out this fall.

"The MDRT role is critically important for patient well-being," says Sonja Chamberlin, academic chair in SAIT's School of Health and Public Safety.

"Surgeons would be unable to perform their jobs if the instruments were not ready and sterile for use."

These professionals clean, package, sterilize, store and handle medical supplies and instruments to exacting standards to ensure infection prevention and control and aseptic techniques.

These skills are needed in a variety of healthcare settings, including hospitals, dental practices, surgical offices (e.g., eye surgery clinics) and extended care centres.

WRITE LIKE A PRO WITH MRU

Not everyone has a way with words, but if you do, or would like to, the technical writing extension certificate at Mount Royal University will have you writing like a pro in no time.

While the demand for print content may have seen a decline in the past few years, the demand for written copy for digital is always in demand.

"Technical writing has come a long way from where it began — writing memos, emails, business letters, etc.," says Lyndsay Steffler, technical writer, technical operations for WestJet Airlines, and instructor for the technical writing program at MRU.

"Currently, with the acceptance and use of technology, technical writing has adapted online, but that's not to say that paper publishing is no longer required or used, but rather to a lesser extent than previously."

This program offers a diverse education focusing not only on the essentials of effective writing, but also best practices in audience and purpose analysis, document readability, visual communication, writing and design for digital media, and word processing tools.

It is designed for any type of business professional and is among the fastest growing and most lucrative writing professions, whether you wish to work for an organization or start your own business.

Starting this fall, the program will feature new and updated curriculum as well as an exciting addition of an online program.

"Technical writing is a rapidly growing profession which specializes in business communications in the form of writing," Steffler says.

"Technical writers can be found in all types of industry."

Some examples of career opportunities include software documentation, medical documentation, technical editing, and instructional design, while new opportunities can also be found in marketing and digital media.

Digital marketing now leading-edge program

Keep up-to-date on new trends at Mount Royal

While marketing to customers through billboards, radio, and newspaper ads are still effective, digital media has added a new dimension to marketing and strategic communications.

With this in mind, Mount Royal University has added the new marketing and strategic communications extension certificate for traditional and digital media starting this fall.

"The program is a combination of timeless marketing principles plus coverage of what's happening in marketing today," says Sheridan McVean, MBA, DMC, APR, president, McVean Communications Inc., and course instructor.

"This is a new program with a leading-edge curriculum — leading-edge because the new courses have been created specifically for the program and reflect innovative and current marketing concepts and knowledge."

Students will learn marketing fundamentals, integrated marketing communications, and branding, as well as the innovative and new marketing areas of content marketing, digital marketing research, social media, and word-of-mouth marketing.

"Marketing fundamentals continue to be important, but keeping up-to-date on new marketing has become a significant challenge for anyone interested or involved in marketing and strategic communications," McVean says.

The program has been designed for those individuals who are currently in a communications-focused position and would like to focus on and/or join the marketing field, marketing and communication practitioners who wish to formalize their education and obtain a recognized credential in the field, and individuals who seek to gain entry into the field of marketing and communications.

The program also might be of interest to managers and decision-makers whose role includes responsibility for marketing and communications.

The course curriculum was developed and is taught by working marketing practitioners who also have strong educational credentials such as MBA degrees and other academic qualifications.

McVean has more than 25 years experience in marketing, integrated marketing communications and public relations.

FIELD OFFERS FLEXIBILITY, FUN

HOTEL & TOURISM

The hotel and tourism industry can be one filled with fun and adventure.

Whether it is travelling from destination to destination, or working the front lines of a hotel and meeting new people, the hotel and tourism management diploma from Academy of Learning Career College will help you get on your way into this exciting field.

This 34-week program appeals to individuals who are charismatic, outgoing, capable and energetic who are looking to gain a broad range of management and operational skills in the hospitality industry.

Graduates will be ready for a number of careers in the hospitality industry, including hotels, restaurants, and resorts.

Academy of Learning is Canada's largest network of career colleges where students can earn their diploma in less than a year, which means they can be career-ready much sooner than many other institutions.

"We are always active in adding and improving specialized programs in response to the demands and opportunities of the labour market," says Charles Jarvis, general manager, Academy of Learning Career College.

At Academy of Learning, there is no need to wait for the start of the next semester, or worry about wait list since there are new programs starting every week.

Online programs make it easy to pursue an education

With eCampusAlberta

The simple fact is people are busy.

Whether it's work or family commitments, it can often be difficult to take time out from one's busy schedule to pursue an education.

That is where eCampusAlberta can help since it offers a large number of online programs in business, health, early learning and child care, and much more.

The online learning environment allows these individuals the flexibility needed to pursue their dreams while working full time and caring for their families.

"We are frequently contacted by students who are looking to improve their lives or the lives of their families by exploring a new career path and their passion — helping others," says Joanna Bossert, eCampusAl-berta administrative staff and student liaison.

For those interested in pursuing their dreams of a career in the health-care field, the hospital unit clerk certificate program, offered by Bow Valley College through eCampusAlberta, will prepare students to manage information in a hospital nursing unit.

This 16-month program covers subject areas such as basic human needs, hospital organization, medical terminology, processing medical orders, computer skills, and communication skills.

Applications are open for January 2015, and applying early is recommended.

For more information about this program, visit ecampusalberta.ca.

Do something you're passionate about

School can help you reach your second career

Is it possible to switch careers from performing audits and preparing financial statements to de-boning a chicken, creating the perfect meringue, and chopping vegetables into uniform-sized pieces?

That's the plan, says Celia Clutton, 28, of Mississauga, Ont., who enrolled in Le Cordon Bleu Culinary Arts Institute in Ottawa last June.

Clutton's post secondary education started at York University in Toronto several years ago. She studied accounting and then earned her chartered accountant designation from the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. But after working for a few years, Clutton realized it wasn't what she wanted to do long-term.

Now she's working towards Grand Diplôme® at Le Cordon Bleu Ottawa — and setting her sights on a career in the food business. Her goal is to work for a catering company or large hotel and eventually start her own catering company — where she will combine her cooking and finance skills.

LE CORDON BLEU: AT YOUR SERVICE

Le Cordon Bleu is a famous culinary arts school that was founded in Paris in 1895. Today, it is an international network of culinary arts and hospitality institutes. At the Ottawa campus, students may obtain the internationally recognized Grand Diplôme® in less than a year. For more information, visit lcbottawa.com.

"I love French cuisine, and I thought it would be the best foundation for me in terms of starting a career."

One of the reasons Clutton enjoys the classes is they're small, and there's a lot of one-on-one time with the chef instructors.

"I had some 're-learning' to do ... I learned how to cut an onion properly and how to dice faster.

"In the pastry class, they teach you how to make everything from pies to cakes without relying on thermometers or mixers. Everything's by hand in the first level, and I think that's the best way to go."

Clutton's love of food and cooking came early. At age nine she watched the Food Network after school, often asking her mom to pick up groceries on her way home from work and then cooking the family a meal.

"I believe if you do something you're passionate about it's never going to be a job. You'll always wake up wanting to go to work and looking forward to the next day, and that's how I feel."

Turn your passion for food into a career.

Stadium will be ready for Labour Day Classic: Tiger-Cats owner

Hamilton Tiger-Cats owner Bob Young is vowing that Tim Hortons Field will be ready to host the Toronto Argonauts in Monday's Labour Day Classic.

"To quote the movie 'Apollo 13,' failure is not an option. We are determined to play Labour Day at Tim Hortons Field at 1 o'clock," Young said at a news conference Monday.

The promise comes amid concerns over construction delays at the new stadium, which was originally scheduled to open in July.

Ex-Roughrider cut from KC Chiefs

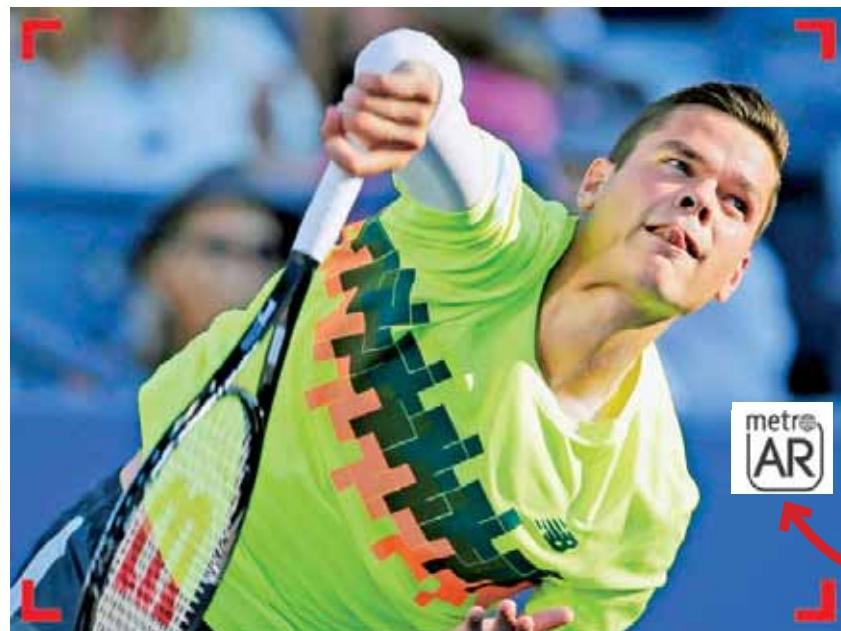

Former Saskatchewan Roughriders star Weston Dressler has been cut by the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs.

The Chiefs announced on Monday that they had waived 11 players, including the 29-year-old receiver.

Dressler spent six years in the CFL, where he caught 442 passes for 6,531 yards and 43 touchdowns. He caught 70 passes for more than 1,000 yards and nine TDs in helping the Roughriders win the Grey Cup last season. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stamps back West after brother killed

Tragedy. Joe West's younger brother shot dead in Arkansas

Quoted

"He's doing as well as can be expected."

Head coach and general manager John Hufnagel, on Joe West

The Calgary Stampeders are giving receiver Joe West the time and support he needs to cope with the death of his brother.

Brandon Hobdy, a 23-year-old receiver at Southern Arkansas University, was shot dead off-campus early Sunday morning. Within hours of learning of the tragedy, a grieving West had 129 yards on four catches in Calgary's 32-7 win over the Redblacks in Ottawa.

The Stampeders gathered at a residential golf course Monday morning in Calgary for their annual charity tournament which raises money for high school athletics.

Stampeders' head coach and general manager John Hufnagel awaited word from West on funeral arrangements and his travel plans.

"He's doing as well as can be expected," Hufnagel said. "His teammates were there to help him through it. He played the game."

He played the game with a lot of emotion, obviously. But he was able to control it.

"Joe was always a respected player on our football team, but that grew leaps and bounds yesterday."

While West flew back to Calgary with the Stampeders on Sunday night, SAU held a candlelight vigil for Hobdy at Wilkins Stadium in Magnolia, Ark.

Hobdy and 24-year-old Wayne Payton were identified as the victims in a double homicide investigation, according to a Columbia County Sheriff's statement.

West, 30, is in his third season with the Stampeders. He was born in Melbourne, Fla., but played high school and college football in Texas.

Teenage stars take over women's golf

For every Tiger Woods, there's a Michelle Wie, a Lexi Thompson and a Lydia Ko. Much-hyped teenage stars are all over women's golf.

Thompson won a major championship at the age of 19, and Ko was 15 and 16 when she won the Canadian Pacific Women's Open in 2012 and 2013. Canada has a phenom of its own in Brooke Henderson, the 16-year-old from Smiths Falls, Ont., who recently finished second at the U.S. Amateur Championship.

Explaining why women find the spotlight in golf so much younger than men has a lot to do with body mechanics and a little to do with advances in teaching and technology that have been refined over time.

"The simple fact is that girls develop earlier than boys," Golf Canada's women's amateur coach Tristan Mullally said. "They reach their peak height faster, they develop in terms of their end body type faster.

"By the time they're 15, 16, 17, they're not going to change as much as a boy will."

Mullally added that a lot of teenage boys can't keep up with full-grown men on the PGA Tour because it's hard to drive the ball 300-plus yards consistently. Canadians Mike Weir, Graham DeLaet and David Hearn are in the majority of men who have taken longer to find their games.

Weir won the 2003 Masters at 32, while the 32-year-old DeLaet is only now enjoying his prime. Hearn took until just before his 34th birthday before he made the cut at a major tournament.

BoSox shoot down Jays in 10th inning

MLB. Toronto comeback falls short of a win against division rival

In a month that continues to go from bad to worse, the Toronto Blue Jays came agonizingly close to a stirring comeback win Monday night before literally falling short.

Another foot or so and Edwin Encarnacion's ninth-inning blast to left field would have been a game-winning home run instead of a double off the wall to tie the game at 3-3.

And the Jays' joy at the three-run outburst in the ninth was short-lived when Boston's Yoenis Cespedes singled home the winning run in the 10th inning for a 4-3 victory that ended the Red Sox's eight-game losing streak.

Shortstop Brock Holt singled off Aaron Sanchez (2-1) with one out and then stole second — surviving an instant-replay review — and third before Cespedes sent the ball past a diving Munenori Kawasaki with two outs for the winning run.

"We made a run at it. We needed another foot or two on Eddie's ball," said Toronto manager John Gibbons. "And then we couldn't shut them down (in) that extra inning. So disappointing, definitely disappointing."

Boston (57-74) was in control going into the ninth, with starter Clay Buchholz holding the Jays to two hits over eight innings and homers by Mookie Betts and Dustin Pedroia giving the visitors a 3-0 lead.

this month.

The opposition scored first for the fifth straight game, dropping Toronto's record to 20-39 on the season when it falls behind out of the gate.

The Jays (66-65) had hoped to put an end to their August swoon given their success this season against Boston. Toronto had won six straight against the Red Sox and 10 of the 13 meetings between the two prior to Monday.

Left-hander Craig Breslow pitched the 10th for his first save, despite putting the tying run on via a walk.

Buchholz struck out four and walked two in a near flawless outing that kept the dormant Jays offence in check until the ninth. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NHL. Sens sign Anderson to contract extension

The Ottawa Senators believe they'll have one of the best goaltending tandems in the NHL rather than a goaltending controversy.

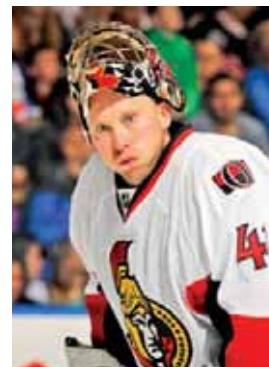

The Senators signed Craig Anderson to a three-year contract extension on Monday worth $12.6 million US, just weeks after signing Robin Lehner to a three-year deal.

"I think it's a great thing for the Ottawa Senators having two guys that we feel can be No. 1, two guys that can go in the net at any point and time and win games," Senators assistant GM Pierre Dorion. "I think they work well with each other, they're going to push each other and I think it's only a good thing for our team and our fans."

The 33-year-old Anderson has one year remaining on the four-year deal he signed with Ottawa prior to the 2011-12 season. He'll make $4.75 million in 2015-16 and 2016-17 and then drop to $3.1 million in 2017-18.

He was relieved to have the contract completed before the start of the season.

"Taking the contract part out of the equation allows me to focus completely, 100 per cent on my job of stopping the puck and there's no distraction.

The Senators now have goalie Craig Anderson under contract until the end of the 2017-18 season.
